

About Us

Joe Reid is a credentialed teacher who taught math for many years. During that time he worked in special projects enabling him to give more individual help and diagnose students' learning difficulties. He was also a math advisor and part of developmental teams for innovative math programs. He presented at state and national math conferences and published in the National Journal of Arithmetic Teachers.

Joe Reid also worked with students with learning disabilities. He was a Resource Specialist for over 20 years helping students overcome their disabilities. During that time he presented at state and national conferences on learning disabilities.

Joe Reid holds a Masters Degree in psychology with an emphasis in learning theory. He also holds a Masters Degree in computer science. In addition to his math teaching experience and his years as a Resource Specialist, he was an educational therapist working with students in the area of math, a district administrator and a computer programmer.